"Good morning," said the little prince.

"Good morning," said the railway switchman.

"What do you do here?" the little prince asked.

"I sort out travelers, in bundles of a thousand," said the switchman. "I send off the trains that carry them: now to the right, now to the left."

And a brilliantly lighted express train shook the switchman's cabin as it rushed by with a roar like thunder.

"They are in a great hurry," said the little prince. "What are they looking for?"

"Not even the locomotive engineer knows that," said the switchman.

And a second brilliantly lighted express thundered by, in the opposite direction.

"Are they coming back already?" demanded the little prince.

"These are not the same ones," said the switchman. "It is an exchange."

"Where they not satisfied where they were?" asked the little prince.

"No one is ever satisfied where he is," said the switchman.

And they heard the roaring thunder of a third brilliantly lighted express.

"Are they pursuing the first travelers?" demanded the little prince.

"They are pursuing nothing at all," said the switchman. "They are asleep in there, or if they are not asleep they are yawning. Only the children are flattening their noses against the window-panes."

"Only the children know what they are looking for," said the little prince. "They waste their time over a rag doll and it becomes very important to them; and if anybody takes it away from them, they cry . . ."

"They are lucky," the switchman said.

HENDRICK HUDSON HIGH SCHOOL

HALFMOON 1969

We are seniors. We want to leave our mark on the school: something to make us a memorable class to our teachers, our parents, our classmates, and to one another. Therefore, we have chosen for our yearbook theme, the story and eternal messages presented in the book The Little Prince by Antoine de Saint-Exupery.

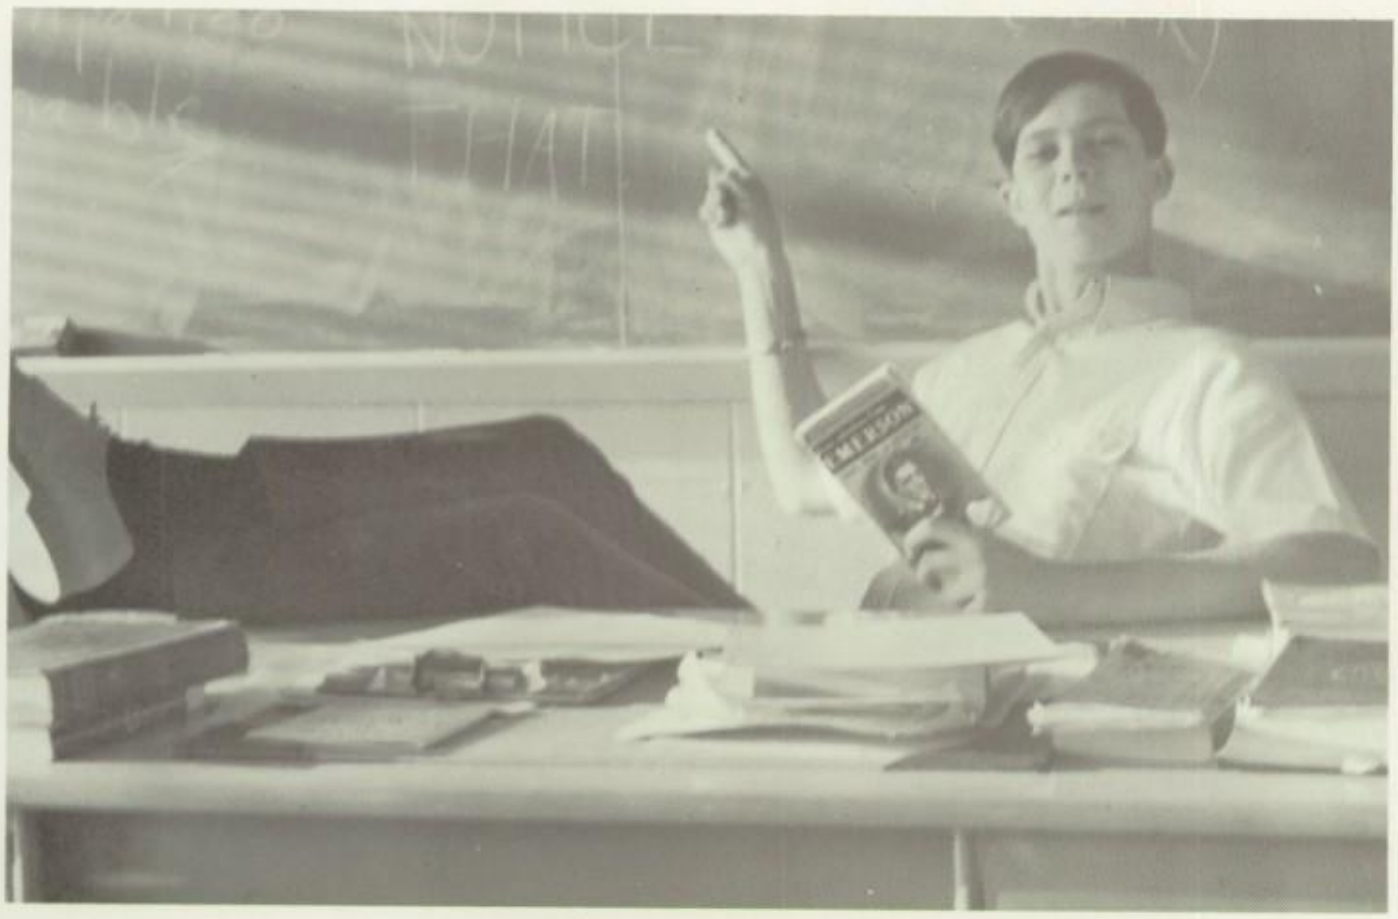
As a story, it is read and loved by children. However, for all of us it presents human truths. The narrative, briefly, is of a little prince from another planet who visits various asteroids, and on each finds a different class of human, each found within our society. The simple prose makes very clear the shortcomings of human nature and how easily they are perceived by the little prince. The one failing most often pointed out is our emphasis on the importance of material things. Sometimes we count too heavily on possessions, rather than on the enjoyment that people can give us. As the king on one of the asteroids told the little prince, "Judge yourself first, it is the hardest thing of all."

There is so much strife and confusion in so many areas. We want to have a different, refreshing, and serious look at ourselves and our values. We want to graduate into our adulthood with this quotation from The Little Prince as our guide: "It is only with the heart that one can see rightly; what is essential is invisible to the eye."

The Little Prince went to look again at the roses. "You are beautiful, but you are empty. One could not die for you. To be sure, an ordinary passerby would think that my rose looked just like you — the rose that belongs to me. But in herself alone she is more important than all the hundreds of you other roses: because it is she that I have watered; because it is she that I have put under the glass globe; because it is she that I have sheltered behind the screen; because it is for her that I have killed the caterpillars (except the two or three that we saved to become butterflies); because it is she that I have listened to, when she grumbled, or boasted, or even sometimes when she said nothing. Because she is my rose."

Life can sometimes seem aimless. Responsibility can give it purpose. Taking interest in something can give it value. In doing for others, one can benefit. One way to gain responsibility is through one's vocation. No matter what scope the job entails, it can give satisfaction. Responsibility can be intensely personal, also. Caring for one person, or a family, can give fulfillment. Caring for something can make it special. It may be meaningless to the world, but unique to the individual.

Hendrick Hudson High School has instilled in many a sense of responsibility. To some degree this has been through participation in activities. But more important is the atmosphere and the close contact between student and teacher and student and student. Giving students a sense of responsibility is one of a high school's primary jobs. If the school succeeds, it is looked upon with respect. Hendrick Hudson has our respect.



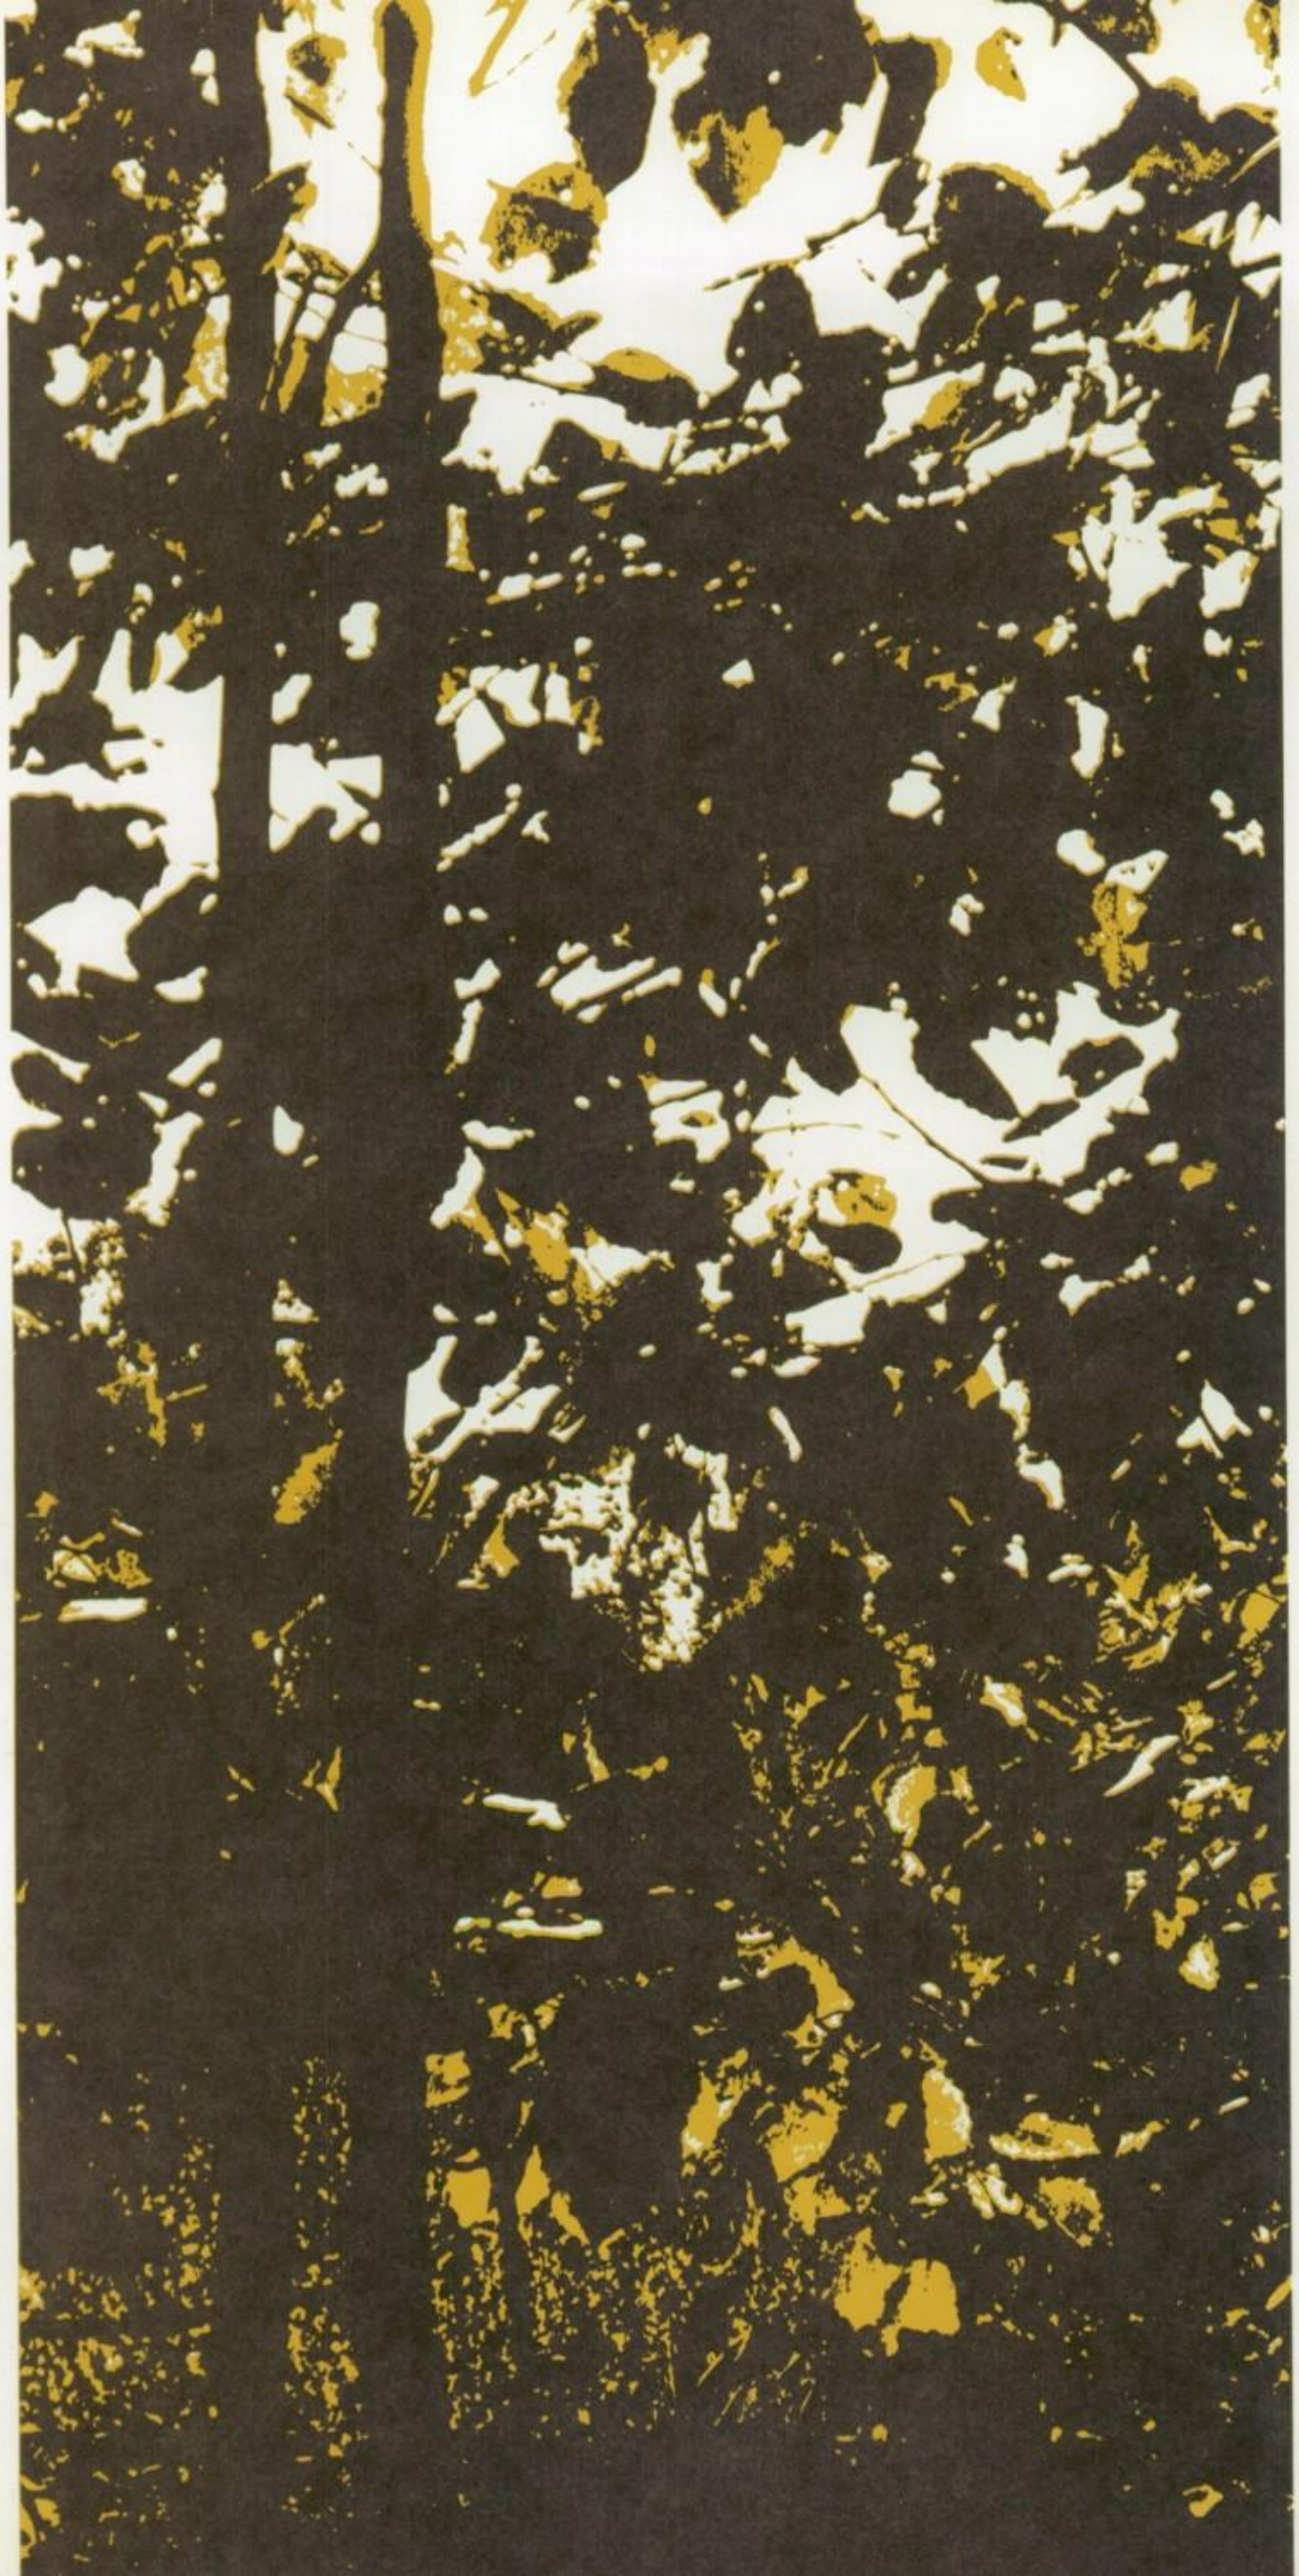
"What does that mean – 'tame'?"

"It is an act too often neglected," said the fox. "It means to establish ties."

"To establish ties?"

"Just that," said the fox. "To me, you are still nothing more than a little boy who is just like a hundred thousand other little boys. And I have no need of you. And you, on your part, have no need of me. To you, I am nothing more than a fox like a hundred thousand other foxes. But if you tame me, then we shall need each other. To me, you will be unique in all the world. To you, I shall be unique in all the world . . . Men have forgotten this truth, but you must not forget it. You become responsible, forever, for what you have tamed."

We seek forever to be "Tamed," as that which we would tame is also seeking. The heart is a lonely hunter, and its arrows search to reach another heart. Two beings touch, and out of loneliness, beyond the walls of their bodies, springs a bond. Love is an emotion too often neglected. We prefer not to establish ties; it is easier to remain in loneliness. Yet if the walls break, and if, by chance, the link is forged, then we realize how unbelievably beautiful it is to be unique in all the world. We are responsible for what we love, but this personal commitment must be extended. There is a responsibility which transcends the personal and envelops the entire race, for we can no longer lead our solitary existence, forever apart.



"In one of the stars I shall be living. In one of them I shall be laughing. And so it will be as if all the stars were laughing, when you look at the sky at night . . . you — only you — will have stars that can laugh. And when your sorrow is comforted (time soothes all sorrows) you will be content that you have known me. You will always be my friend. You will want to laugh with me. And you will sometimes open your window, so for that pleasure . . . And your friends will be properly astonished to see you laughing as you look up at the sky!"

Now we part; we will scatter to many different corners of the world, but the memory of friends made at Hendrick Hudson will linger on. The triumphs and frustrations of these past six years have transformed our high school experience into something which is not easily forgotten. Our path in life is smoother now; we are all the richer for having met. The parting is painful, but ever as we look forward with hope to what the future holds for us, we know that we will always be friends.

IRWIN J. MAYER MEMORIAL FIELD

A life shines with promise . . .

Through a time of tempering and learning . . .

Grows the joy of joining with others . . .

Challenges are met . . .

Skills develop . . .

For three decades as teacher, counselor, principal, and friend to the students of Hendrick Hudson High School and the citizens of Central District #3, Mr. George Kiefer has exemplified sincerity and devotion to the principle of responsibility that will surely continue to influence our lives and the lives of children attending our school for as long as free education exists in this nation.

The editors of the 1969 Halfmoon wish to take this occasion to express on behalf of the Senior Class and Mr. Kiefer's many friends and former students their heartfelt thanks for all that he has given to them. We wish him happiness in his retirement years ahead. The editors respectfully dedicate this publication to a man whose years of service in Central District #3 represent a promise fulfilled.

And the life is dedicated . . .

To those who follow.

Board Of Education

First Row: Warren A. Button, Marshall M. Truex, Vice-President, Paul S. Herwitz, President, Joseph W. Bilello. Second Row: Leo C. Ferris, George E. Upton, Wayne P. Mengel, Sr.

Will the day ever come when the news media have no word of man's self-destruction? We have come to a time in history which is deeply troubled with conflict.

Should we accept this as a way of life? It is my hope that you have developed a sense of concern for your fellow man during these years at Hendrick Hudson High School. I hope that you are not willing to accept wars and poverty as a way of life, but that you express this concern by fulfilling your responsibility to mankind.

It is easy to write off world-wide problems, but then what about our responsibilities to one another in the community. Again, I hope that by your actions you will strive to make your community a place where men of all faiths, races, and colors can live in peace.

You are the last class to graduate under George Kiefer. As you leave Hendrick Hudson, I can think of no one who better personifies man's responsibility to man than Mr. Kiefer. You will do well to accept the challenge of living by his code.

I wish you every success!

Thomas J. Jenkins
District Principal

Your theme of "Man's Responsibility to Man" is most timely. Never before has Man had a greater need to understand the nature and problems of his society. More important, he must understand with compassion the differences that separate his society from others.

Within our nation today, we have separations in our own society, separations that, unless we educate Man to recognize and alleviate them, may well lead to the downfall of this nation. Our best chance, in my opinion, to solve the problems we now face, lies in education.

Here at Hendrick Hudson, I would like to believe that we have fostered and provided an educational opportunity for all to develop the knowledge, understanding, and compassion we need so badly if this nation is to survive as Man's best hope for the future.

May I wish for each of you in the days ahead, a life of tolerance, understanding of others, and peace. If we have contributed to this end, we have been worthy of the trust placed in us by your parents.

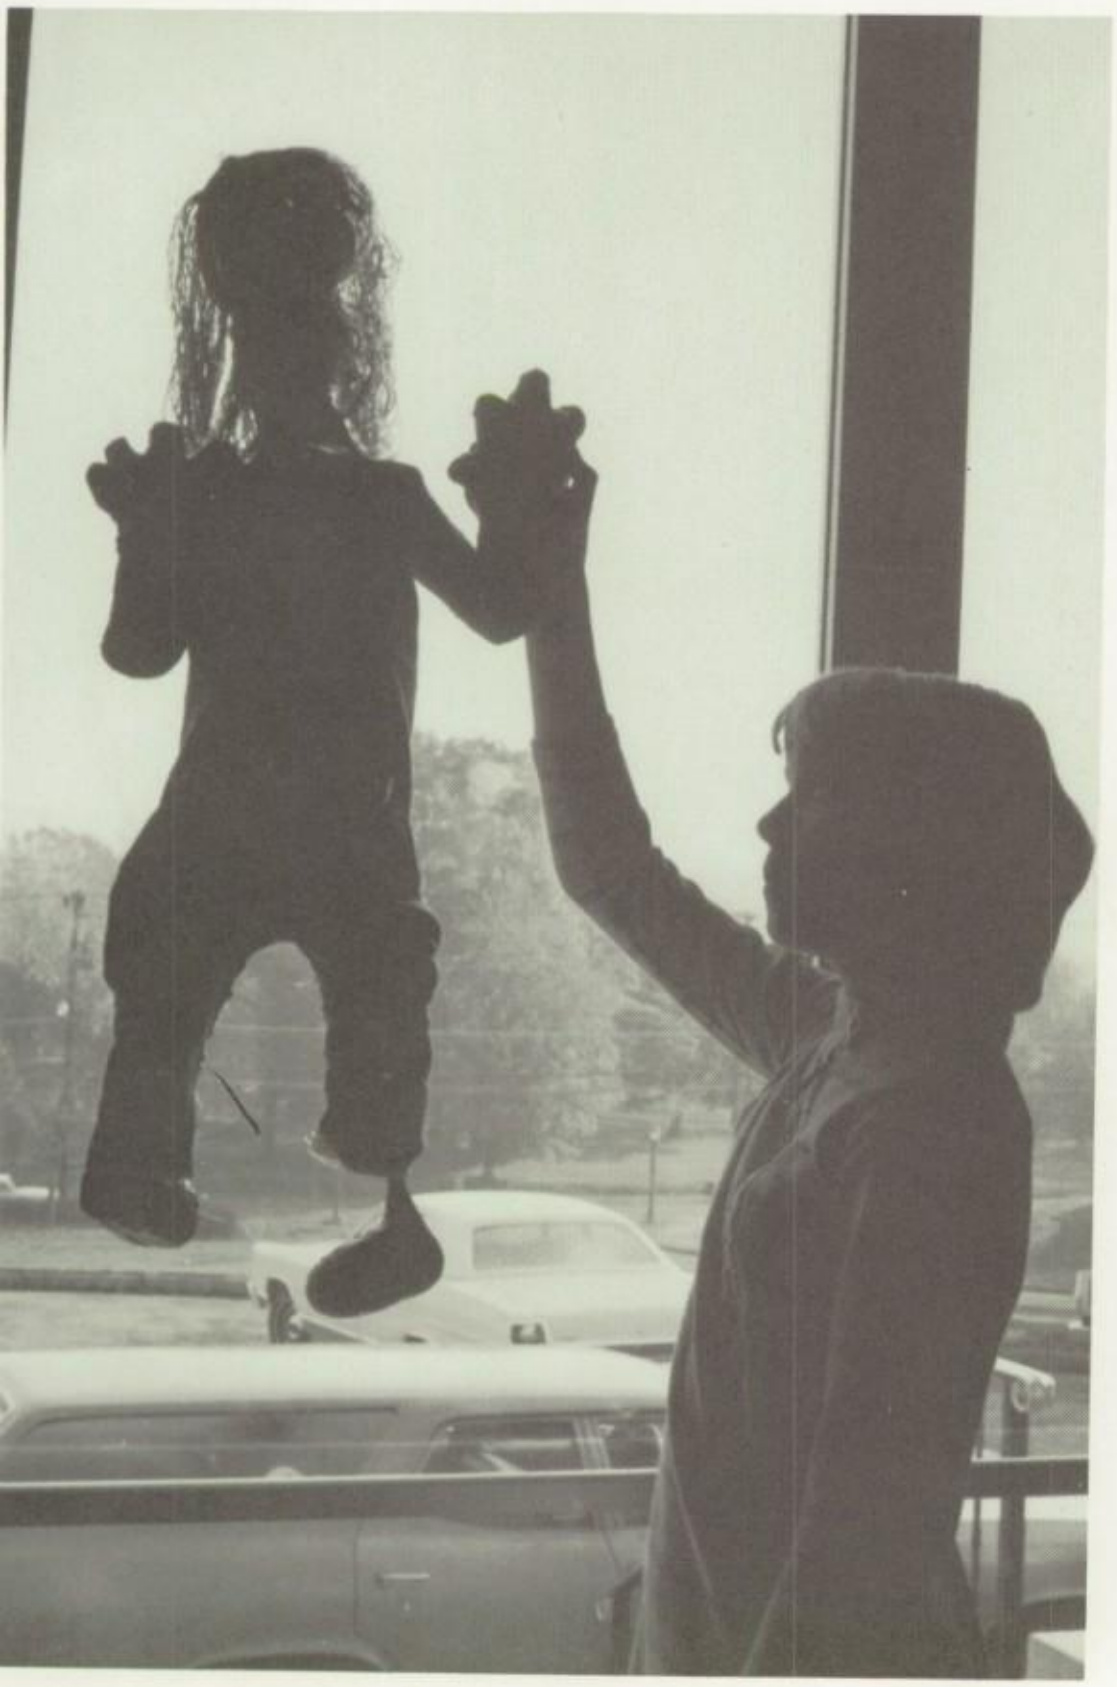
UNDERCLASSMEN

But the shrub soon stopped growing, and began to get ready to produce a flower. The little prince, who was present at the first appearance of a huge bud, felt at once that some sort of miraculous apparition must emerge from it. But the flower was not satisfied to complete the preparations for her beauty in the shelter of her green chamber. She chose her colors with the greatest care. She dressed herself slowly. She adjusted her petals one by one. She did not wish to go out into the world all rumpled, like the field poppies. It was only in the full radiance of her beauty that she wished to appear.



The underclassmen enter a new world. It is an older world, and there are many things to learn. They are confused and uncertain, curious and eager. Then they begin to understand, and their purpose becomes clear. They become aware of their responsibilities to themselves and to others, and, like the rose, start to prepare carefully for the future. They learn and grow, and gradually move closer to their goal—Tomorrow.

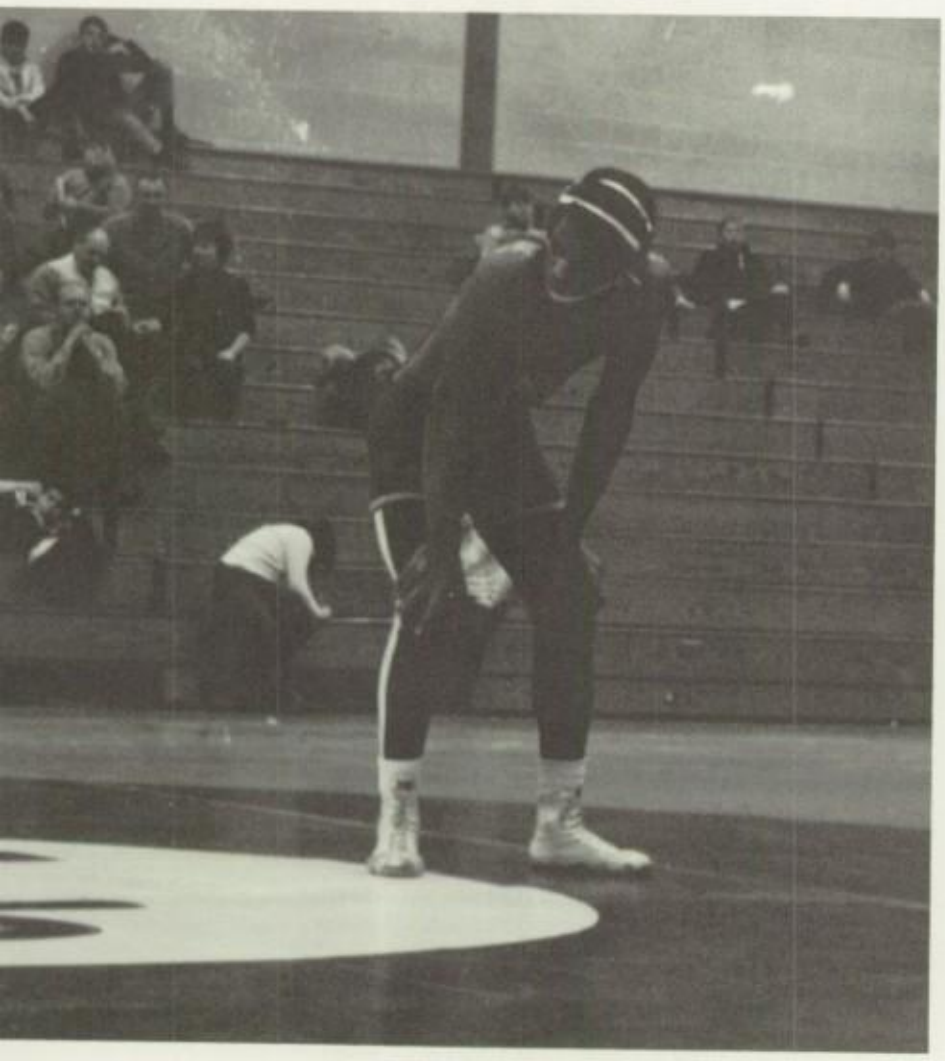
SPORTS

Sports are a reflection of life. They are intense, direct, and on simpler terms than all the other aspects of high school. They involve two concepts: responsibility to one's self and responsibility to others.

The degree of responsibility that the athlete has to himself is synonymous with his desire. A wrestler must overcome the fear of isolation, of contending alone with another wrestler. A football player must give fully on every play. A runner must have the stamina to finish strongly.

A group of individuals must work well together, for a team is more than the sum of its parts. To have the necessary physical harmony, there must be emotional harmony. Each member must work together to maintain morale in defeat, and not to overinflate it in victory.



"And what do you do with the stars?"

"I administer them," replied the businessman. "I count them and recount them. It is difficult. But I am a man who is naturally interested in matters of consequence."

On matters of consequence, the little prince had ideas which were very different from those of the grown-ups.

"I myself own a flower," he continued his conversation with the businessman, "which I water every day. I own three volcanoes, which I clean out every week (for I also clean out the one that is extinct; one never knows). It is of some use to my volcanoes, and it is of some use to my flower, that I own them. But you are of no use to the stars . . ."

"But if you don't tie him," I said, "he will wander off somewhere, and get lost."
My friend broke into another peal of laughter:
"But where do you think he would go?"
"Anywhere. Straight ahead of him."
Then the little prince said, earnestly:
"That doesn't matter. Where I live, everything is so small!"
And, with perhaps a hint of sadness, he added:
"Straight ahead of him, nobody can go very far . . ."

We grow; outwardly young adults, inwardly much of the child still remains. We experience a moment of wishing we had not committed ourselves. We yearn for the false security of non-involvement. Child men and child women, we attempt and fail and gradually emerge victorious in this battle against the limited.

We, like the little prince, find satisfaction in exploring wooded paths.

"Then you shall judge yourself. That is the most difficult thing of all. It is more difficult to judge yourself than to judge others. If you succeed in judging yourself, then you are indeed a man of true wisdom."

It is time that we move on. Our years here have ended. We have given and have received. We have sought answers and found that, in truth, the answers were questions. We have begun to appreciate, to understand, and to make decisions. We are just beginning to understand ourselves, for the process of molding and building has been long and complicated. If these six years have made us capable of judging ourselves with honesty, then we are ready to become a part of the world. And if we are ready to take our place in the world, no man can say that these six years have not accomplished something wonderful.

That which is essential is invisible to the eye.
